

Small Steps Lead To Big Changes

By John E. Weare
 Keep Alliance Beautiful

Corner to corner within a week on Highway 2. I had occasion to visit Crawford and Toadstool Park, within miles of South Dakota, on a Saturday, then head out early that Thursday for an overnight trip to Nebraska City, near Iowa, for the Keep Nebraska Beautiful (KNB) Conference. That much windshield time was fitting as I thought about the communities on the route and people I would join from throughout the state for two days at the Lied Lodge.

Considering what we do at Keep Alliance Beautiful, and the success stories shared by other Keep America Beautiful affiliates in Nebraska, I thought the conference theme was apt: Small Steps Lead To Big Changes. The opportunity to meet in person did provide "passionate community leaders with a chance to learn about the latest developments in waste reduction, recycling, beautification, and litter reduction" as promised in the conference program. Organizers also asked, "We all work hard each day to meet our community's needs and sustain our programs, but what will Nebraska look like one year from now, or 10 years from now? How can our programs meet the needs of our changing communities and environment?"

I was not thinking a year or a decade ahead as I pulled into the parking lot Sept. 29 – just a few minutes into the future. My intent is always to be early though in this case I slipped into the room as the opening speaker, Keep America

Beautiful President and CEO Jennifer Lawson, began her presentation.

After hearing the former president's farewell remarks when I attended the national convention in Washington, D.C. this past November, it was impressive to meet the organization's new leader. Lawson, who started on May 16, addressed the top issues currently facing Keep America Beautiful.

"(I am) optimistic we can work through these challenges and get this organization back on track," she said. A slide titled "a strong and vibrant network," reinforced that sentiment with the top bullet point: Building a deeper and stronger connection to everyone in the network by learning from each other and executing with consistency and excellence.

Specifically, Lawson cited a disconnect concerning the Great American Cleanup. According to this year's numbers, she said, there was only a 25-percent reporting rate. The actual impact of the nationwide event may have been greater than ever, however without data it is difficult to quantify success. She described Keep America Beautiful's commitment to academic-led research, evident in the 2020 National Littler Study.

What is the value in a cleanup? "We need to change the narrative from litter to money," Lawson said. "Companies cannot make a commitment to 100 percent recycled without bottles back. They are willing to pay to get bottles back. How do we make cleanups about economic opportunity?" She explained that "waste" is not without value, rather it is a resource in the circular economy.

Keep America Beautiful goals look different in practice for every affiliate and the communities they serve. Yet, Lawson asked her audience of a few dozen, "How do we come all the way with answers to 'now what'?" Key in changing behavior will be the need to invest in a process to educate consumers how not to litter, she said.

Before closing with a question and answer session, Lawson encouraged everyone to prepare for a milestone – the 250th birthday of the United States of America on July 4, 2026. She said Keep America Beautiful is asking to make sure every city and town in Nebraska is a clean place for the nationwide celebration "of our ideals that engages people in a nonpartisan, active and pride-building experience."

Less than four years is enough time to plan more than a county-wide cleanup. I have no doubt local residents can cooperate to make everything look spiffy. In the months ahead, share your ideas with Keep Alliance Beautiful about how our local communities can collaborate for "the party of the century".

Nebraska City Notes:

Information sticks in my brain better when I jot down highlights as I listen. Taking notes started in school, becoming more important as an Alliance High freshman then essential a couple years later to write newspaper articles. braska Beautiful (KNB) Conference. The two-day event at the Lied Lodge in Nebraska City featured speakers, topics and activities of interest to the state's two dozen local KNB/Keep America Beautiful affiliates. How the people in attendance disseminate what they heard will depend on its value.

I began my account with Jennifer Lawson. The Keep America Beautiful president and CEO's update got things rolling. The rest of the agenda warrants a broader brush (at least initially), in my opinion. It is unclear what Keep Alliance Beautiful will garner from the presentations in the weeks and months ahead to take the "small steps" which "lead to big change" referenced by this year's theme. However, I also appreciate the effort necessary to host the conference and opportunity for in-person networking.

After the opening speaker, highlights from the next 22 hours:
Thursday, Sept. 28

1:45 p.m. – Mike Mostek, an attorney at Mostek Law in Omaha, expressed his desire to offer something to KNB. Each affiliate will be able to access four hours of free legal consultation per year.

2 p.m. – Kim Guyer, campaign manager with The Steier Group, Fundraising/Development: How We Can Start Fundraising For Our Affiliate Office. Kim emphasized forming and maintaining relationships for donor involvement. She spoke to having the right makeup for a board of directors as well as utilizing a visionary committee. I found her "unique selling point" strategy insightful: what do you bring to the people nobody else does? Kim's slides were even personalized with photos of Nebraska state parks she's hiked.

3 p.m. – Trolley ride/tour of the Arbor Day Farm and Mansion. I had been to the farm though not the 52-room historic mansion once home to Arbor Day founder J. Sterling Morton and his family. Seeing the history inside, as well as the carriage house and tack room, was fun. The most novel fact, to me, was that J. Sterling's son Mark had married Martha Parkhurst Weare, daughter of John Weare – the first time I'd seen my name in a museum exhibit. 6 p.m. Awards dinner. Great conversation while learning about the amazing environmental and beautification projects happening around Nebraska.

Friday, Sept. 29

8:30 a.m. – After breakfast, Karl Elmshaeuser, Nebraska Environmental Trust executive director, discussed Grant Process, Guidelines and Timelines. Since NET has been a major source of our funding traditionally, Karl's presentation was a valuable reminder of how the non-code state agency operates. Their 14-member board is considering 87 applicants for $38 million to be awarded in January.

9:30 a.m. – Affiliate Sharing, including Jack Hilgert, Conservation Education coordinator at UNL. Attendees highlighted some of their best practices and program ideas. There were projects that could succeed in Box Butte County and others that were admirable but not the right fit. One of the most practical and useful was a waste reduction guide printed on 100 percent recycled paper.

11:15 a.m. – Economic Development: How the work we do fits into the growth of our communities, presented by Mike Rooks - director of Washington County Economic Development, Dan Mauk – executive director of the Nebraska City Area Economic Development Corp, and Andrew Rainbolt - executive director, Grow Sarpy. There were parallels between these southeast Nebraska counties and the Panhandle, such as the observation "Companies want to be in a more sustainable community." Recycling has been our most direct involvement with area businesses.

12 p.m. – KNB President/CEO Bob Verkuilen closed the conference as we turned in name tags and questionnaires. One blank asked where we would like to meet if the event were to be hosted in western Nebraska. I don't know if KAB would throw our name in the hat, but maybe we can all gather in the Mountain Time Zone in a year or two.
